

Do you like meeting different people?

Are you passionate about other cultures?

Do you like travelling around the world?

Do you want to learn about life in other countries?

Are you interested in international youth cooperation?

If yes, this means you should get active with IFIL. We all work in an honorary capacity for the successful organization of study trips to different countries, whereby participants will learn about the country's history, its culture, its economical structure, its politics and its society with a view to promote intercultural understanding.

IFIL, the Initiative for Intercultural Learning (IFIL), is an independent non-profit organization, who has been promoting intercultural learning through organizing (intercultural) workshops and study trips since 2006. Every year young people organize study trips to any corner of the world with the support of IFIL. Participants of such trips are mostly students and young professionals with different backgrounds.

You can find more information on www.ifil.ch. In case you should not find what you are looking for or if you happen to have any questions, don't hesitate to contact Jonas Schmid, our chairman of the executive board (jonas.schmid@ifil.ch). We look forward to hearing from you!

Our organization needs you and your talent!
